INSIDE THE BELTWAY

The Libyan leak

The leak of secret plans regarding tactics which might upset the government of Libyan president Muammar Qaddafi is of such concern to President Reagan that he has ordered relentless investigation to be followed by prosecution of the source to the fullest extent of the law, sources say. Current suspicion regarding the source of Bob Woodward's article in the Washington Post is veering away from Capitol Hill. Sens. Alan K. Simpson, a Wyoming Republican, and Daniel J. Evans, a Washington Republican, said they have talked with members of the Senate Intelligence Committee and it couldn't have come from them because they haven't even seen the reports that were mentioned in the story.
